

Hello Adventurers! Today Glider Girl & I chatted "What to do?"

In a rare occurrence, "nothing planned". Louie was the first winner, and off to the bark-park we went...

Wow Louie & Glider Girl look great, eh? Louie was his usual "rocket-self" at the bark-park, run/run/run while most other doggies wander/watch and pretty-much "do nothing".

Then we had an idea... Glider Girl had always wanted a pistol-shooting lesson, so off we went to the local range...

Here's Glider Girl... On-target... Shooting a Ruger .22 auto-pistol with a laser-sight...

...another view...

I too had a great time... Both Glider Girl and I loved the (below) .22 auto-pistol...

..and I must say it was an honor to instruct Glider Girl on her first "shoot". Note we actually started in my TV room, handling (unloaded) pistols and "dry firing" (learning to point/hold, trigger-pull, simulated load/unload).

During our 1.5 hour shoot, Glider Girl shot .22 & .38 Special revolvers, and a .22 auto-pistol with very-hi-tech "red-dot sight"...

Unfortunately, our visit to the range was shortened by the arrival of a guy with a .308 military auto-rifle (below) yikes the BLAST was overwhelming and everybody left ☹ ☹ ☹ ☹.

Oh well... Time for lunch! And this being SoCal... Where else but Glider Girls favorite lunch-place... In-n-Out...

<http://www.in-n-out.com/history.asp>

...and, this was a really tiny place (just 3 eat-stools)...

...and the entire outside was small...

...and so if you're wondering "How do they sell enough burgers to make a profit?" the answer is two drive-through-lanes...

...WooHoo welcome to SoCal! Speaking of which... The city-under-construction ("Laguna Crossing" literally across-the-street from me) has ceased all operation. Deads-ville (formerly "humming with activity"). Picture courtesy of Autostitch...

Well readers, that's it for our day...

Thanks for reading along! Paul P.
