

Adventurers! Today will be our day! We will conquer the notorious Moab White Rim Trail. All does not start well... Never good to see a bike apart within minutes of departure... But hey... Fixed!

Red Line Synthetic Oil Company was our sponsor...

Off we went, taking the "scenic route" on our way to the trailhead...

L-R Tom (BMW), Art (KTM), invisible-me (Kawasaki), Preacher (Yamaha) and Pigpen (Suzuki). We would head up the canyon in the below pic...

Never-ending awesomeness 😊 😊 😊...

...through this incredible rock...

Below, looking back at the rock from the other side...

We all grouped at the trailhead, meeting Murph and the FJ...

Below: Fuel would be critical, Murph "tanked us"... Way to go Murph!

Pigpen gives the signal... Off we go...

The sun was blazing, making pics tough due to "sharp shadows"...

Above is me, the road far below our entry to the White Rim Trail.

We were contemplating entry, down the below inviting road...

Flat tire! Ride-out on the flat? Change it? Try to get Murph with a trailer?

Consensus: Fix it... Team Red Line Moab sets to work...

Tire-changing in the field is a very difficult task...

Art & Tom changed the tube in an hour! Below, then Tom's BMW (below) would not start, fuel-pump "dead"! Bummer!

What to do? Decision: Head home, "regroup", plan for another assault...
When at lunch... Oh no... Another flat!

What now? We checked/rechecked all the bikes, "fixed" all the mechanicals that we could, and made plans to try again on Wednesday.

Stay tuned! Paul P. pencipa@yahoo.com
